

SHERRY M. ROACH

Sherry will serve as the Project Coordinator for the Main Streets Complete Streets Project. She is excited to join the team working towards revitalization of the downtown corridor. She focuses on being a proactive problem-solver and building relationships with multiple stakeholders.

Sherry has over 10 years of experience in public works and the municipal environment. She has with notable experience with complex public infrastructure projects, construction inspection, and working with state and federal agencies. Sherry also has experience working in business management and project management in the private sector, including civil engineering, production, design, and retail industries.

Sherry began her career working for the City of Farmington in the late 1980's where she developed a love of design and engineering. After leaving Farmington in 1996 she transitioned into the private sector with a variety of management positions. She then returned to the public sector in 2008 with the City of Houston, which quickly developed into a project management position. During this time, she was part of the project team for the BBVA Compass Stadium (Houston Dynamo's), Halliburton's campus expansion, and was on the Leadership Team and the Safety Committee. In 2013, she returned to her hometown of Farmington.

Sherry's education includes San Juan College and Bethel University. She is trained in Traffic Control and Daily Documentation and has been awarded Employee of the Month in 2009 and 2017.

When not working, Sherry enjoys spending time with her husband camping, hiking, biking, and other outdoor recreational activities in the Four Corners area.
